

Dear Friends of the Foundation,

The start of the new year provided a time to reflect on our substantial progress and plans for the future. We had a productive and gratifying year in 2008 fulfilling the goals of the foundation through the advancement of entrepreneurship and entrepreneurship education in Northeast Ohio. While we have accomplished a great deal and plan to continue this momentum, national and global financial conditions will have an impact on our work, and we must adjust accordingly. We will do our best to support programs already underway, but new projects may need to be placed on hold while the financial climate stabilizes.

We ask for your patience and understanding as we make tough, but necessary decisions to carefully steward the foundation's assets and simultaneously accommodate the needs of our grantees and partners. We have tightened our belt on operational expenses, and we assure you that we will do our best to make wise and fair decisions. We have been through similarly difficult times in the past and have no doubt that we will all successfully navigate these times as well.

Students, seniors team up $10,000 goes to worthy projects

When seventh graders from Seton Catholic were asked to define “needs” in the community of Hudson, they talked in terms of a skate park or a few new traffic lights.

That was in the fall of 2007 — before they began nine months of study, a journey that took them to Cleveland to fix Thanksgiving dinner for poor kids, to the Akron Canton Regional Foodbank to volunteer and to Hattie’s Café, where they met and mingled with adults with disabilities.

At the end of those nine months, the most dedicated eight students were chosen to continue with the project. They were matched with eight seniors from the Laurel Lake Retirement Community — and given $10,000 to grant to address a need or needs.

The 2007-2008 youth philanthropy project, supported by a grant from The Burton D. Morgan Foundation, recently culminated with a reception at Laurel Lake for those who participated — both young and old — and those who received Founded in 1967 by the late industrialist and entrepreneur Burton D. Morgan, the Foundation invests in projects that further its mission of preserving the free enterprise system.

The Foundation is interested in supporting projects that nurture creativity, invention, entrepreneurship and innovation.

To that end, the Foundation will invest in projects that fall into three life phases — starting with childhood, continuing through college and then into adulthood business activity.

NEOCEP lauded

The effort to bring an entrepreneurial mindset to liberal arts campuses in Ohio has won praise from a national advocate for entrepreneurship education.

“I admire what your Foundation is doing,” William S. Green told trustees of The Burton D. Morgan Foundation at their January meeting. “You’ve taken the more radical path,” he said. “The last place people expect to find entrepreneurship education is in liberal arts.”

Green is a senior vice provost and professor of religious studies at the University of Miami. He was at the University of Rochester in 2003 when that school became part of the first Kauffman Campuses Initiative, an effort by the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation of Kansas City, Mo., to transform the way colleges and universities prepare students for success.

In 2006, The Morgan Foundation teamed up with Kauffman to bring that effort to five liberal arts campuses in Northeast Ohio. Green applauded the efforts of the Kauffman Campuses Initiative to change the norms and said it must continue — even if there is some pushback.

“It’s no longer enough in education to teach students how to find a job,” he said. “We need to teach them how to make a job.”

grants.

It was very clear what a difference 16 months had made in the lives of the young participants.

The skate park and traffic lights had given way to real need — helping an AIDS orphan stay in boarding school in Zambia, buying boots and shoes for poor children in the Hudson City School District, providing funds so developmentally disabled children can participate in the 2009 Summit County Fair’s equestrian competition.

The money helped sustain a video service available through Case-Barlow Farm. It bought sheet music for the community band and will help to bring some concerts for younger people to Hudson this summer. “If you do philanthropy, it will change your life forever,” eighth grader Vince Moeglin told those at the reception.

The project was proposed by Barbara Boyce from the Laurel Lake Foundation after she saw a similar program in Cleveland. She liked not only teaching children about philanthropy but also the interaction between the seniors and students, who became friends as they teamed up and searched for the right places to invest the grant money.

Laurel Lake enlisted the help of administrators from Seton, especially teacher Pat Neidert who guided the classroom work and planned the field trips.

The biggest lesson learned was that a small amount of money could help so many people and make such a difference.

“I liked learning how we can help people in such a positive way,” said student Elizabeth Poston.

Last fall, the Morgan Foundation renewed the grant, and a new seventh grade class is busy learning the lessons that will help the students with their grantmaking this fall.

Participating from Laurel Lake were Sally Davies, Margaret Fissinger, Sally Griswold, Margaret Hlinka, Gerry Jones, Rosanne Massey, Gus Stuhldreher and Bruce Sullivan.

Students participating from Seton were Vincent Moeglin, Matthew Onders, Elizabeth Poston, Alyson Synek, Anna Baumhoer, Julia Geiger, Zach Leciejewski and Randi McCaughley.

Grant to “re-invent” Camp Invention

Grants to infuse entrepreneurship into Camp Invention and to help John Carroll University develop a minor in entrepreneurship were among those recently approved by trustees of The Burton D. Morgan Foundation:

Consortium for Entrepreneurship Education — $15,000 to sponsor 14 Northeast Ohio teachers to attend the 2009 Entrepreneurship Forum in Norfolk, Va.

E CITY — $42,000 to bring an entrepreneurship teacher-training workshop to Northeast Ohio in 2009. The workshop will be conducted by the National Foundation for Teaching Economics, which focuses on teaching entrepreneurship to disadvantaged students.

National Inventors Hall of Fame Foundation — $40,000 to develop an entrepreneurship-focused Camp Invention program in collaboration with Junior Achievement and pilot it in Akron and Wooster.

Lake Ridge Academy — $15,000 to help the Lorain County school hire a consultant to evaluate its admissions process.

Entrepreneurship Education Consortium — Up to $79,000 for Entrepreneurship Immersion Week in the summer of 2009 at Kent State University and for a multi-college business idea competition known as LaunchTown.

John Carroll University — $78,250 to help support the creation of a new interdisciplinary minor in entrepreneurship.

Entrepreneurs Edge — Up to $75,000 for a summer internship program, CEOs for NEO, which solicits new business ideas and assigns them to teams of graduate and undergraduate students for investigation.

Ideastream — $65,500 to support the public television broadcast of Nightly Business Report and BizKids on WVIZ.

Lake Erie College — $36,500 to fund architectural and design fees incurred in developing plans for a proposed entrepreneurship center.

Leadership Akron — $20,000 for Leadership Akron’s 25th Anniversary Endowment Campaign to support programming focused on entrepreneurship during the Business & Economy Day.

First Congregational Church of Hudson — $30,000 to support the church’s general operations and routine maintenance.

Music from the Western Reserve — $15,000 toward the hiring of a part-time manager and the development of a new marketing plan.

Actors’ Summit — Up to $25,000 to support operations of the Hudson theater’s 2009 summer repertory festival and 2009-2010 mainstage season.

American Red Cross of Summit and Portage Counties — $30,000 to aid those in our area in need of disaster relief.

United Way of Summit County — $50,000 toward the 2008-2009 campaign.

Taking inventions to the next step

A $40,000 grant will allow the organization that runs Camp Invention to work with Junior Achievement of North Central Ohio to develop an entrepreneurship-focused invention camp.

The pilot will be tested this summer with the goal of rolling it out nationwide.

“We feel there is momentum and for a modest grant, our area is taking a leadership role in this effort,” Burton D. Morgan President Deborah D. Hoover said.

A pre-pilot infusing Junior Achievement lessons with Camp Invention goals was tested in Hudson last summer. This student works on a marketing plan.

82 students become one-day interns

Hudson Community First has placed 82 students in internship programs this year -- more than five times the number who participated last year.

They spent time with doctors, scientists and investment officers. They saw the inside of the newspaper business, a radio station and the Cleveland Observatory.

Internship for a Day was part of a career-education program sponsored by a grant from The Burton D. Morgan Foundation.

Community First has a mission of keeping teens on track by providing activities that excite them and engage them with the community.

Morgan Leaders honored

early February. Students are chosen each year for their scholarship and leadership and each receives a $10,000 scholarship.

This year’s Morgan Leaders are Anne Song, Jessie Gruden, Peter Anderson, Garren Gotthardt and Sarah Puffer.

NFTE speaker in Hudson

Julie Kantor, vice president of governmental affairs for the National Foundation for Teaching Entrepreneurship (NFTE), shared some of her experiences with staff and grantees of the Foundation in October. She is with the organization’s Washington, D.C., office.

Inner-city kids who don’t have parents in business are not getting training on how they will make it in the economy,” she said.

She said NFTE programs, aimed at harnessing street smarts into business smarts, work to turn attitudes of those young people from “I can’t” to “I can.”
